Since the crisis in Zaire began, the administration has been publicizing the restrictions barring or limiting unrestricted covert military assistance to countries and specifically prohibiting such aid to Ango-la, which served as the base for the Katangans who invaded Zaire's Shaba province.

A top-ranking State Department official said Thursday night that the concern about restrictions was genuine and included not only the restrictions on covert action, but the limits put on foreign aid.

Act of Congress Needed

For instance, although the United Sintes was able to speed delivery of military equipment already ordered by Zaire under a military credit program, the President would have been unable to provide Zaire with military equipment on a gift hasis under current law without a specific act of Congress.

The State Department issued yesterday a list of the restrictions. covering several pages.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd. D-W.Va., said yesterday: "The State Department has been unable to provide documentation thus far to indicate that the President's hands are tied in giving assistance to friendly governments attempting to combat Communist insurgency or incursions.

He said that he had discussed the matter Friday with Secretary of Sinte Cyrus Vance and had concluded that the President could act as he desired as long as he certified to Congress that it was important to national security and kept Congress informed.

Mr. Carter, in the interview, said

Although some administration officials have suggested that many of the restrictions should be lifted, Mr. Carter said "I favor a lot of

As to the situation in Africa, he again castigated the Russians, saying that they "are very eager to send Cuban troops actually to be involved in the fighting, and the Cubans respond without reticence."

He also repeated the charge made last week that the Cu-bans had no justification in calling themselves nonaligned.

They are the most heavily dependent and subservient country to the Soviet Union which I am aware of, certainly outside the Eastern bloc itself," he said. The Cuban military presence in Africa 'is inimicable [sie] to peaceful progress and is unwarranted intrusion."

"So through all these matters we try to meet that challenge on a non-military basis," he said. "We have a limited ability to supply defensive weapons to those countries, under very tight constraint from laws that control my actions and we take ad-vantage of that."

missiles and advanced radars for NATO countries. Arms requests, she said, were rejected from 19 countries that do not have military supply relation-ships with the United States as well as from 48 countries that do. A new military supply relationship was es-tablished with the Sudan last year.

The department's report was released Finday by the House International Relations Committee on the first anniversary of President Carter's announcement of his overseas arms sales policy. According to the complaint, the key to the case was the unnamed Navy officer who cooperated with the FBI and the Naval Investigative Service after he was contacted in August. Authorities refused to identify the officer. The 13-page complaint outlines a scheme in which the officer never met face-to-face the men with whom he was dealing. Instead, the alleged Soviet spies used a series of valls to public phone booths along New Jersey tumpikes to direct the American to locations for pickups of instructions and money and drops of film of classified docunients.

The operation finally was penetrated, however, according to the charges, when the Navy officer tipped off the FBI agents, who observed the Soviet officials driving to the pickup spots in cars registered in their own names.

After the first contact with the American last August, the complaint said, he was asked to obtain secret information about anti-submarine warfare, including materials involving underwater acoustics and submarine detection systems such as the sub-hunting helicopter.

The European Investment Reearch Center, a holding company in Brussels, estimated recently that Europeans spent $800 million on American farmland last year alone, while other estimates placed the to-tal investment in real estate at several times that amount. But none of the figures are more than guesses.

foreigners are often paying too much for land and driving up prices and taxes. However, some real estate brokers who cater to foreign investors argue that American farmers are overreacting, that there are not as many deals being consummated as the farmers believe.

$16 million for 2,000 acres of undeveloped land overlooking the coast at San Clemente south of here, not far from the home of former Presi-dent Richard Nixon. The same company offered recently to buy 80 percent of a major Phoenix home builder.

Substantial foreign real estate investments were reported in virtual-iy every section of the country. The following examples give an indica-non of the activity:

• In Boston, the 34-story State Street Bank Building was sold to Dutch investors for $35.5 million, and Italian and French companies are among the major investors in Boston's redevelopment effort. In Montana, a recent survey by state officials indicated that foreign buyers had acquired at least 100,000 acres of ranch land. • In Beverly Hills, real estate experts estimated that Arab and Iranian investors had spent more than $150 million in the last 18 months on expensive homes. Paper Shortage Slows China's Education Drive

TOKYO, May 21 (AP) - In its drive to accelerate education for scientists, technicians and skilled workers, China faces a sbortage of one important ingredient — paper, the newspaper People's Daily says.

The newspaper said that there are not enough textbooks to meet demand because for several years paper mills have not met the targets of the state plan and production increases have been small.

Priority is being given to text-books and student workbooks and the situation should improve by midyear, it said:

The newspaper blamed the "Gang of Four" radicals for most of the problems, saying that they had published books that no one read and encouraged careless handling of paper by workers through spreading such slogans as "Be mas-ters of the docks" and "Do not be slaves to tonnage figures."

There were rumors of a move to oust Mr. Morales, who retired as army commander-in-chief early this year, but retained the presidency.

Mr. Morales represents a faction in the armed forces that wants to return operation of government to elected civilians by 1980. The constitutional assembly is the first step. But the armed forces are so unpopular that most are demanding that the military transfer power sooner than 1980.

This is the most difficult moment faced by Mr. Morales since he anseated President Juan Velasco Alvarado, the populist leader of the 1968 military movement, in 1975 and began a gradual effort to moderate the nationalist extremes and fiscal irresponsibility of the military regime, which has spent more than $2 billion on arms.

The Peruvian armed forces are being blamed publicly for the worst economic crisis bere in several decades. Prices have soared, with inflation now at an annual rate of 80 percent. Thousands of workers have been laid off as private firms go into debt and are unable to pay

Politician's Role In 1945 Trial Dims Bonn Goal

The message was unmistakably clear: Moscow has got considerable leverage on West Germany via Berlin and this is no time to rock the boat over Soviet expansionism on other confidents. The approved text of our conversation follows, in part:

CHANCELLOR SCHMIDT— Of course the U.S.S.R. tries to strengthen its influence - if not always successfully. But there is no thought of the West being overwhelmed. The Soviets are realists — they will not end detente, which is in their own interest. We Europeans are concerned about the expansion of Soviet influence political and military — and 1 made this clear to President Brozhnev the other day. On the other hand. Germany is a medium nonnuclear power the size of Oregon, geostrategically in a very delicate and vulnerable situation. No German leader will ever forget this. Nor will he forget the Berlin equa-tion and how anxious we are not to endanger but to maintain that indanger but to maintain that island of liberal democracy. So our free-dom of action is limited. It would be unrealistic and improper for a German head of government to be indulging in those fields of world politics outside our area of responsibility, or even giving advice to the

We are in-deed concerned about the growing imbalance of medium-range ballis-uc missiles in the European theater with the deployment of the SS-20, which the U.S. defines as nonstra-tegic because it cannot bit America. A ridiculous definition. Intra-European missiles are overwhelmingly strategic and could be brought to bear as a means of pressure in a European political context. A.—This would be a good one for Cyrus Vance to answer. Q.—Some of your European col-leagues and pro-Western heads of state in the Middle East and Africo believe that the present administration is less interested in Somet exparisionism than any other adminis-tration since World War II. Is that the perception?

A.—I think it's unfair to pin this label just on the administration. For example, I think the senate made a grievous error in denying military assistance to Turkey, a key NATO member holding the south-Mediterranean. The president is in favor of maintaining military aid to Turkey but the Senate declines. I as worried about the constraints being exercised against very sensible poncies. You see the same thing in the energy field —a key strategic factor. This can be disastrously dangerous. Q .- Do you now feel that you wnderstand what the administration wants and where it wants to go?

A.—On a personal level, contact with Mr. Carter could not have been better. There were many more letters and phone calls than the public knows about. But it became elear to me that after Vietnam presidents are not as successful with Congress as before and it is far. more difficult to read the long-term political lines of Congress than the concepts of the administration. We have to deal with Congress directly more than ever before. Our embassy is not enough. Members of our parliament go over to Washington more and more to talk to the new generation in American politics who have neither emotional ties toward Europe nor specific experi-ence in American-Europen cooperauon. Thus the whole process of interallied decision-making becomes far more complex than in the past in strategy, energy trade and monetary policies. Horrendously complicated: Cooperation between democracies is becoming more and more difficult to manage. But we must be careful. Freedom has its limits or it would not be freedom and we must learn to use it more wisely.

Q.—Why does Mr. Brezhnev keep talking up the growing danger of a world war as there is not threat what-soever from the Western side? Is this designed to produce more concess-sions and conditioned reflexes of appeasement from the West? A.-On the one hand, yes, but on the other hand nobody should underestimate the enormous losses the Soviets suffered under Hitler's attacks, memories that are still vivid in Mr. Brezhnev's generation. They therefore have a strong mouvation for defense. At the same time Mr. Brezhnev's dedication toward peace is beyond doubt. It seems to me that the Soviet leader ship during the last 10 years, fol-lowing the invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968, has tried to maintain a delicate balance by keeping the military with them while they went ahead with detente with the West. If you see the degree to which the Soviet Union and other Comecon countries depend on Western capi-tal markets. Western technology. it's quite clear that this is not strengthening their ability to operate autonomously belligerently. But it creates quite a lot of interdependence between the economies of West and East Europe.

One of the forecasts, ignored at the time but subsequently proved right, is worrying space program planners. It concerns the 85-ton Skylab satellite which could plunge into the atmosphere as early as next year, hurling debris over immdreds of square miles of the earth's sur-

When the orbiting space labora-tory was launched in 1973, the Na-tional Aeronautics and Space Ad-ministration expected that it would remain in orbit for 10 years, long enough so it could control its eventual descent or boost it to a higher orbit, with the help of the new pace shuttle.

The prediction was based on certain assumptions of sunspot and other solar activity. But solar activity turned out to be greater than expected, and in 1976 the center here began warning that the upper atmosphere would soon start grazing Skylab, bringing it down much sooner than expected.

Last month, Jeffrey Smith, writing for the journal Science, dis-closed that NASA had ignored the forecast, relying instead oo its own projections. Science speculated that NASA's decision might have been made partly to keep Congress in ig-norance of Skylab's imminent

By Morton Mintz

WASHINGTON, May 21 (WP)
- An association between oral contraceptives and an easily detectable and curable precancerous genital condition has been reported by a scientist who stressed a need for more studies to try to find out whether a cause-effect relationship

The condition, called cervical cancer, occurs in the cervix, the neck of the uterus. With the aid of a simple test called the Pap smear, it can be readily detected and cured. Left untreated, it can spread. In at least two dozen studies during the years, researchers have neither proved nor disproved a link between the pill and cervical can-

A major reason for their difficul-ty is that sexual behavior and the type of contraception affect the inple, a woman with multiple sex partners increases the risk of getting cervical cancer; a woman using a diaphragm, or whose partner oses a condom, decreases the risk.

Dr. Savitri Ramcharan reported Thursday that in one of the largest and most comprehensive studies ever made of pill side effects cervical cancer in women who had used the sex-bormone drugs for at least four years was about three to five times as common as in women who never used them.

The study indicated that the risk of cervical cancer increased with the duration of use; 17 of the 35 cases occurred in women who had taken the pill for four or more years. The rates per 100,000 per-son-years of use were: zero use, 32: up to one year, 63; one to four years, 97, and four years or longer.

Dr. Ramcharan emphasized, however, that sexual behavior particularly a woman's age at first intercourse and the number of sex-ual partners — "could be responsi-

The economic situation during the first few months of the current 1977/78 fiscal year continued to be marked by different developments in the overall economic situation and in individual branches of industry. Adverse economic effects and the repercussions of an aggravated steel crisis produced a major impact on the Thyssen Group's plain carbon steel sector during the winter months. Although tonnagewise a certain recovery was noted in orders booked for plain carbon steels and in spite of a favourable demand for goods from other sectors of the Group, Thyssen AG's production and sales declined during the past months of the 1977/78 fiscal year. The Josses incurred by plain carbon steel persevered, though with a downward trend during the second quarter of the year. The trend of the Group's result will depend primarily on how the plain carbon steel business will develop during the forthcoming months.

In the plain carbon steel sector, the Thyssen Group will pursue its longstanding policy of concentrating its production on the most up-to-date facilities. The persisting worldwide steel crisis will make further adaptations necessary. The main objective of the unchanged high investments are rationalization and improvement of quality. Our specialty steel sector is orienting its product mix towards items of increased value, and international business is being reinforced. The capital goods and other manufactured products sector is centered around the development of new products and markets. The Thyssen trading sector is streamlining its sales organization and expanding promising programs.

Under changed worldwide economic conditions, efforts continue to enlarge the basis of our company's activities. On April 25, 1978, the shareholders of The Budd Company in the USA approved of the merger with Thyssen. This will lead to a substantial reinforcement of the capital goods and other manufactured products sector of the Group, including primarily the manufacture of products with considerable value added.

The Right Policy on Zaire

The Carter administration's response to the trouble in Zaire strikes us as on the money. To meet the emergency of 2,000 European civilians reportedly threatened by rebels who crossed from Angola, the administration made 18 transport planes available to Belgium and France, whose nationals they are; the handful of Americans in the battle zone had already reached safety. Then, to make a gesture of support for the again-embattled regime of President Mobutu Sese Seko, the United States promptly offered $20 millioo worth of "conlethal" aid (spare parts, communications gear, petroleum, etc.)

Meanwhile, Fidel Castro bas called in the chief American diplomat in Havana to say that Cuba is not taking direct or indirect part in the Katangese incursion into southern Zaire. The United States followed by stating that the Cubans in Angola had armed and trained the Katangese. Whether that cootradicts the Cuban in dicts the Cuban assurances isn't clear. (Zairian and French reports, we note, assert that Cubans and Russians are present in Zaire proper.) But it is, as the diplomats say, interesting that the Cuban should take the initiative he did. It suggests at the least an intent to soften the confrontation that has been building between Washingtoo and Havana since Cuba's African adventures began two or more operations ago. None of the nationalist political claims that the Cubans used to justify their policy in Angola and Ethiopia are relevant to Zaire, where the Katangese are secessionists and marauders, nothing

It will surely take more to be sure that Cuba gets the message that the United States won't stand still for repeated Havana-sponsored and -manned interventions in Africa.

There are, however, a couple of other ave-oues that the Carter administration bas been exploring. One we doo't care much for. That is a reported attempt to find a legal way to engage in clandestine operations in support of forces opposing the Cuhans in Angola and Eritrea. We can't imagine that clandestine operations would stay clandestine—the story that they are being studied proves the point—or that they would be effective. What is done in Africa ought to be done openly. Given the public's raised consciousness of the Cuban-Soviet role, we do not think the administration would have great difficulty gaining public support for a well-conceived military-aid operation in critical African situations. We have in mind support of besieged friendly governments, as in Zaire.

There is another avenue, represented by Zbigniew Brzezinski's current trip to Peking The Chinese have their own reasons to counter what they see as Soviet expansionism in Africa. On the eve of the White House aide's arrival, they coodemned attacks hy "merce-naries directed by the Soviet Umon and Cuba." Others, such as Saodi Arabia, also have their own reasons and resources. Until now, the Chinese and the Saudis felt that the United States was oot taking the African problem seriously. It is apparently one of Mr. Brzezinski's purposes in Peking to demonstrate otherwise. If be can, then it becomes possible to imagine various forms of cooperation designed to slow the Soviet-Cuban momentum in Africa. Its leadership responsibili-ties do not require the United States to do everything itself. They do require, however, that the United States provide a context in which others will feel encouraged to do what they find essential to their own national

The Kremlin's War at Home

Yuri Orlov, a 53-year-old Soviet physicist, has been sentenced to a maximum 12-year term in Moscow for attempting to monitor Soviet compliance with an international agreement, the Helsinki Accords, that the Soviet government signed three years ago. In the eyes of the Soviet state, he "slandered" the state by calling the Kremlin publicly to account for violations of the human-rights provisions of the accords. Mr. Orlov was held incommunicado for the 15 months before his trial. The proceeding itself elicited from the government claque packing the courtroom cries of "spy" and "traitor" and, upon sentencing, "he deserves more." It was, in sum, a revolting and all-too-characteristic performance by the Soviet government and one that decent people everywhere, first of all in the Soviet Union, will condemn. The Kremlin's war against the finest instincts of the Soviet people seems to have no end.

Mr. Orlov is the first of three Soviet dissidents whose scheduled show trials have become central to the atmosphere of current Soviet-American relations. The three cases coincide with, and have seemed to be something of a response to, the hard initial human-rights thrust of administration policy toward Moscow. That thrust has since been moderated, partly out of a growing recognition in Washington that the Kremlin would not shrink from making the intended beneficiaries of American concern pay. Awareness has also spread that conspicuous Soviet repression feeds back into the American political context, diminishing support for such other administration interests as arms control. Meanwhile, the thug element in the Kremlin is having a field day.

For Yuri Orlov, there must be respect and compassion. But there must also be acceptance of a requirement to match the promotion of human rights abroad with the particular foreign context in which they are neces-sarily worked out. This demands a measure of self-discipline at odds with the outrage Americans feel for foreign abuses, particularly for Soviet abuses. The United States cannot he in the business of helping create martyrs. It can only do what it can to widen the scope for individual liberty. It ought to strive, in so doing, to keep open prospects for progress on other fronts.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Quebec in American Eyes

Premier Rene Levesque was in New York last week preaching his gospel of souverainteassociation - sovereignty for Quebec, but in association with Canada - and attempting to dispel the fears that an independent Quebec would be had for American husiness. He may well be right: his provincial administration has been far from radical in its fiscal measures. But there is a more concrete reason why Americans can look calmly oo the matter: Quehec separatism appears to have passed its peak. The English Canadians have absorbed much of the Quebec message; they may not agree with it, but they are resigned to "the French fact." In all likelihood, the province will reach an accommodation with Ottawa, avoiding the trauma of separatioo. The issue that most concerns Quebec's French-speaking 80-percent majority is the cultural security of their French island in an English-speaking sea. Many also reseot the fact that Montreal, their major city, and Canada's financial center, is dominated hy English Canadian firms and that English speakers dominate their business life. The purpose of the famous (or infamous) Bill 101, which Mr. Levesque's Parti Quebecois pushed through soon after its electioo in November, 1976, was to change all that, and it has succeeded. The language for all business, even among English firms, will he French. Some firms, unwilling to make that adjustment, are leaving, a price Quebecois seem willing to pay. But most have evidently decided to stay, and are transforming themselves with more than token determination.

Meanwhile, throughout Canada, bot especially to the resource-rich west, there are substantial pressures for decentralization, to reverse the flow of power, from the provinces toward the federal government in Ottawa. Quebec has been making the headlines, but other provinces share many of its irritations with federal policies.

These changes make it likely that Mr. Levesque will lose his promised Quebec referendum on independence when it is finally held. The polls still indicate that only ooefourth of the population favors complete separation. So, Mr. Levesque may retreat to the formula of "independence" with "association" - meaning the benefits of remaining in Canada without the costs. Pierre Trudeau, the federal prime minister, threatens to counter with his own referendum to let the rest of Canada define the limits of its sympathy. Canadians generally, for instance, are unlikely to grant an "independent" Quebec the national customs barriers that now exist largely to protect the province's inefficient industry.

All of this only strengthens the already serious challenge that Mr. Levesque faces in his province from the Liberals be defeated in 1976. They have chosen a new leader, Claude Ryan, a respected and popular former editor of the influential Mootreal newspaper, Le Devoir. He favors greater autonomy rather than independence - within the framework of "a more fraternal and tolerant Canada." Provincial elections are probably a few years away, hut recent polls give the Liberals a slight edge.

Mr. Ryan's selection guarantees that the cases for and against independence will be thoroughly aired. Canada's neighbors should not ask for more.

Where Does Nonviolence Begin?

By Ashley Montagu

sense of innate depravity and original sin that bedeviled so many Victorians, has today assumed a form that renders it more appealing than

The cootemporary proponents of innate depravity, most ootably ethologist Konrad Lorenz and authologist Konrad Lorenz and an-thor Robert Ardrey, have, in the language of our time, saddled human beings with an "instinct of aggression." This alleged "instinct" is at once designed to explain our violent behavior and to account for the destructive conflicts in which

The truth is that buman beings bave oo instincts. Indeed, there are many societies that, far from engaging in aggressive behavior, are remarkably nonviolent and cooperative. Examples are the Tasaday of locas of southern India; the Tabitians, the Hadza of Tanzania, the Ifaluk of the Pacific. the Yamis of the western Pacific, the Lapps, the Arapesh and the Fore of New Guinea.

These peoples reveal no evidence of the existence of an "instinct of aggression." What they do reveal is that human beings everywhere are capable of learning whatever their society causes them to learn.

When anthropologists study such nonaggressive societies, we obsave that it is principally through their child-rearing practices that such so-cieties produce cooperative, nonviolent personalities.

Great affection is lavished on children. From infancy on, small children are scarcely ever out of bodily contact with someone who is either cuddling or carrying them. When children do not have toys to play with, they play with their younger brothers and sisters or other small children, and no one seems in enjoy the fan more than the little ones. Boys equally with girls enjoy the company of small

In these societies, when a child pulls a stick away from another child, it is not perceived as "aggres-sive" or "bad" behavior, but as a perfectly natural thing for a child in do. And so the older children just laugh and grab the younger one and good-naturedly roll with him on the ground, until he, too, joins in the spirit of the game and laughs with his playmates. No one admonishes the child or frowns at him, and no one punishes him. No one tells him that he is "naughty" or "bad," and no one ever strikes a child, but always he is embraced and caressed, and is tactfully cor-rected only at a later age — if nec-

L OS ANGELES.—The great served and photographically repower of blackness," as Hercorded such responses among the man Melville called that Calvinistic Fore of the highlands of New Typical Reaction

He writes. The typical reaction of older children and adults who were the subject of hostile or aggressive reactions by the young was interested, affectionate amusement. If the attack became painful, the subject of it would usually move away or try to divert or distract the young child by affectionate playfulness or by engaging him in other interests. When such 'aggression' was directed toward young aggmates, it was discouraged — bur, again, not by reproach or punishment, but rather by diversionary, playful activity or amusement."

Sorenson adds that, as a consequence, anger, squabbling and fighting did not become natural to their lives," but "cooperative deference or attunement" did.

It is much the same story for all other nonviolent societies. Among their many remarkable similaride it is fascinating to find that when things threaten to heat up among adults, they avoid any expression of violence by simply walking away from the situation.

Aggression and nonaggression are learned ways of behavior. Every society provides models for its pre-ferred forms of behavior — models that are cootinually reinforcing the behavior of the individual.

America sets before the child the most aggressive kinds of models, and theo we wonder why we have such high rates of violent crime.

Today we know that by far the larger proportion of a child-batterers were themselves battered or ne-glected children. We know that those who have been emotionally deprived during childhood are likely to turn into aggressive adults. And we also know that those who have been adequately loved as children are likely to develop into lov-ing, unaggressive adults.

We know, too, that peoples who engage most fiercely in competitive sports" are likely to be the most warlike while those who play games for fun are likely to be the most peaceful.

Prof. Richard S. Sipes of the University of New York at Buffalo recently carried out an extended study on this subject. the most venerable institutions of the nation.

Now, we are told, many of the leading protesters of that day have joined the institutions they once condemned. We are told that this year's class, 1978, is more interested in getting a Job, affording a house, and finding a mate than in changing the world.

William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, and one of the distinguished statesmen of American education over the last generation, agrees that there has been a transformation of method, if not of philosophy, among college graduates losophy, among college graduates in the last 10 years, but he hesitates to reach sweeping social or political conclusions about it.

More Serious

"There has been an enormous change," he agrees. "They are a much more serious group today.

"This doesn't mean that they're totally preoccupied with finding some career to follow and make money. They're more oriented now toward issues, that influence their future — environment, political structures, the quality of their lives.
They're not the demonstrating types. They express themselves in ways that are more effective.

"They'll come and call on you and sit and talk and challenge, and offer constructive thoughts....But I don't hold that they're just thinking about jobs and marriage. There's a purposefulness here — I don't quite know what words describe it exactly - but at our graduation this year there were at least 3,000 young people at commencement. Ten years ago, we numbered them in hundreds. This doesn't mean they're getting back into the old rit-ual of American life, but I think they're trying to say: We under-stand some things are important and we want to enjoy that, we want to be part of it, but don't ask us to take on too much. We're going to cut it out for ourselves.

"We had some protests here about The Wilmington Ten, but it was very orderly. They made their point and I gness that's symbolically the difference. I was impressed by the way they protested. They came to the administration, told them what they were going to do, didn't ask permission, but said they didn't want to disrupt anything. They just wanted to make a point. I think this college generation is very reassuring."

Maybe the point is not that this year's college graduates are so different but that the times are so different. In '.'68, there was a wait wait a conflict between the end of the century, and all private life and public duties. There was a sense of uncertainty, of not being able to plan your life, of not now than the Class of '68.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C.—Ten years ago, the college graduating class of 1968 was in revolt over the Vietnam war, stunned by the murder of Robert Kennedy just before graduation day, and shaking shaggy heads and even fists against the most venerable institutions of the nation.

Now, we are told, many of the leading protesters of that day have joined the institutions they once condemned. We are told that this year's class 1978, is more interested in getting a Job, affording a house, and finding a mate than in changing the world.

William Fidday, president of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, and one of the distin-

this year's college graduates is obvi-ously not as gloomy as it was 10 years ago.

What is particularly interesting about these past 10 years is that to many of the fears that dominated the news, if not the thought, of 1968 have not been realized since them. The Vietnam war did cone to an end finally. The revolt of the campuses at that time did influence the decisions of the White House and the Congress to withdraw.

And the withdrawal from Vietnam did not, as predicted, produce that domino collapse into Commission. nist control or make the United States look — in Nixon's phrase — like a "pitiful helpless giant." There have been unspeakable tragedies in Cambodia and Laos, but no major switch in the Pacific balance of

Talks Go On

Also, the Communist alliance between Moscow and Peking has not been restored after the deaths of Chou En-lai and Mao Tsc-tung. India has come back, after its flirta-tion with Moscow, into more civil and cooperative relations with the West. Ten years ago, the present process of negotiations, compro-mise and even reconciliation in the Middle East would have been unthinkable, but despite all the conflicts over planes, territories, settlements and Palestinians, the compromise talks go on, if intermittently.

So it's no wonder that the Class of '78 is not throwing deans out of second-story windows, or conducting counter-graduation exercises. They don't have to worry about an imperial presidency, out of control, sending them off to war, but only about the danger of a presidency that has not enough control to conduct the foreign policy of the nation, in the Eastern Mediterranean, the Middle East and in

A U.S. 'Defeatist Consensus'

By George F. Will

WASHINGTON As is often and third levels of this administra-W the case with the Carter administration, the kindest inter-pretation of the timing of Zbigniew Brzezinski's trip to Peking is that the administration does not know what it is doing. As is offer the case, that interpretation is too kind.

The administration allowed the national security adviser's trip to be scheduled to begin on the day the Republic of China (Tsiwan) inaugurated a new president. No representative of the Carter administranon attended the insuguration. The administration is collaborating with the Communists in signaling disdain for a nation with which the United States has - inconveniently, in the opinion of some people— relations of friendship, a defense treaty and trade second only to that with Japan among Pacific nations.

The administration is riddled with people who would, if they could, sever hes with the Republic of China and leave it at the mercy of Peking. They cannot do so because Congress and the country and the cou would not stand for it. And there is fresh evidence that a movement of opposition in the administration's foreign policy is taking shape and finding voice.

The Evidence

The evidence is in the transcript of a conversation published in the American Enterprise Institute's magazine Public Opinion (May-June, 1978). The conversationalists, Henry Kissinger and Sen. Daniel Moynihan (D-N.Y.), agree that (in Kissinger's words) "at the second-tion, many people came in who are graduates of [the] Vietnam period. They have convictions that if America is not to be punished for its presumption, then at least we must be sure that the coun-try is never presumptions enough to undertake any more distant enterprises." One problem, according to Kiss-

One proplem according to Kiss-inger, is the recarring tendency of complacent societies to escape current dilemmas by making the most favorable assumption about the future. This temptation is one reason why the communist chal-lenge has been interpreted in the most benign fashion in every dec-ade in the existence of communism." Moynihan believes that another important problem today is fear, as shown in recent debates

"We are continually told today," says Moynihan, "that we have to do this or that, accept this or that unattractive option because if we do not, the Russians will send in the Cubans. And Miss settler in argament!" "What has become of our country, asks Kissinger, when we explain foreign policy by the myth of the invincible

Cubans?"

What Kissinger calls the "defeatist consenses" in the "traditional establishideat" is apparent in the administration's approach to stra-tegic arms limitation.

Threats.

Editor

"Remarkably," says Moyathan, we now have senior officials of this administration coming around to us in the Senate saying we must have a SALT treaty soon because if we do not, by the mid-1980s the Soviets will have surpassed us in strategic power. I can imagine what you, Henry, would think about a negotiating position in which the other side had only to wait 2,000 days to get where they want to be."

Surely. Moynihan insists, the United States must be able to make a believable threat to increase its defense effort enough to convince the Soviets that they must negotiate acceptable limits. The administration is unwilling to make any such threat, and as Moynihan says, "If you have psychologically discarded that burgaining technique, then, in fact, you are disarmed."

The similarity of Kissinger's and Movinhan's views is interesting; so is the dissimilarity of their situa-tions. When Moynihan, a Democrat with a large and growing con-stituency in the country, agrees with Kissinger's diagnosis ("I do not believe that there is a public publicing. In this country we have a leadership problem."), the logic of Moynihan's thought points toward

When Moynihan says that American policy is beginning to accommodate to the assumption that the Soviets are now, or soon that the Soviets are now, or soon will be, the superior military power," he and the administration do not have what Milton called "neighboring differences." What is at issue is fundamental. It is the adequacy of the administration's policy affecting the safety of the state. And in a nation that provides state. And in a nation that provides for regular and orderly challenges to incumbent leadership, such an issue should produce a political

At bottom ("fundamentally") and off the top of my head. I have no quarrel with Andrew Knight's disquisition on American and English as they is spoke (IHT, May 10). It is his "more literate colleague" who has me worried. While he was so archly recommending treading "tactfully," couldn't he have taken the time to get things right?

First, Americans almost never use "industrial action" in mean "strike." (Why should we when that word will do?) Then, why not use "orient" as the root of "orienta-tion?" Is it any less awkward that the ugly reverse parellel, the verb

But it's the German connection that's made me an "upsettee" (not a modern sofa!), because it is so in-relevant as to be absurd. To say that "Iresh (meaning checky [impertinent]) is really prisch is to strike out, because the word simply does not have that connotation in German. It is quite wrong to blame SU.

NEW YORK, May 21 (AP) — Precious and industrial metals futures marched higher last week, deriving strength from the odd combination of renewed inflationary fears and a brighter business outlook.

The upswing in allied metals pushed platinum futures to a spontaneous breaking point," said one analyst. Prices for platinum contracts, which leaped nearly $25 in the July delivery, averaged gains in excess of $20 an ounce. Meanwhile, the invasion by rebels of cooper-rich Zaire triggered heavy speculative demand that lifted copper futures on New York's Comex about 2½ cents a pound. Gold and silver contracts accumulated their best weekly gains - averging $4.50 an ounce in gold and 11 cents in silver - since a flood of inflation-hedge buying in March boosted those prices to record and near-

Copper futures also garnered strength from transportation problems in Zambia and a further decline in stocks at the major European metals

Bad weather and more farmer participation in government programs to set-aside or divert cropland were factors in the upswing in grain prices. Soybean futures slumped about a nickel in near-term contracts, even though a major grain exporter accumulated almost 3 million bushels by snatching up delivery of the cash beans against expiring May contracts. Contracts representing 1978 crop soyleans, however, rose as much as 10½ cents, partially because of estimates that stocks would be lower and xports higher at the end of the marketing year. The May contracts in grain futures expired Friday. The final wheat price was $3.25% a bushel compared with a season high of $3.35 set in April and a low of $2.35% posted last summer.

May-delivery soybeans finished at $7.29 a bushel, off about 80 cents from the top price in mid-1977 but more than $2 higher than the low set last August Corn contracts expired at $2,62% a bushel, about 20 cents under April's high but more than 60 cents above the season low. Coffee futures reacted to Brazilian frost scares and improved roaster demand, jumping as much as 16 cents in distant contracts. Interest-rate futures, after rising earlier in the week, took a beating from hints that the Federal Reserve intended to tighten credit further. Ginnie Mae mortgage certificate and long-term Treasury bond futures toppled to

Spring Rebound Improves Hopes for Year

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, May 21 (NYT)—When the gong rang last Wednesday afternoon to signal the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange, a few cheers certainly were in order. Stock prices stood at their highest We're old hands at new ventures.

Co-creators of first Eurobond. In 1957 Petrofina harl briefed us on a special problem.) the with no standard solution.

Bang

Scrogether with a small group of international banks, we created a new solution: The world's first Enroloud issue.

Since then we're managed and ro-managerl. humbreds of Euroboard issues. Making us one of the world's leading sponsors of this type of financial project. And the one with the longest experience.

Why new ventures appeal to us. Because all too olten the old answers aren't the most precise solution to new linancial problems. Or maybe it's because we're snobs and weprefer togastion-tailor solutions to each customer.

Rather than force him into off-the-rack answers. But we don't tonovate just for innovation's sake. When the standard solution still fits we offer it. All the expected services.

We have the same range of financial services as other international banks. And we back then my with an international network of subsidiaries. representatives, affiliates, associates, correspondents. and banking communities like SFE and Associated Banks of Europe (ABECOR), And with Differential hrandus in Belgium.

But what makes us different from other international banks is our individual attention (ceach) client's individual problems; our reluctance to stick nothe traditional answers; and our willingness to stick our neck out in new ventures.

Like the day we stuck our name on the world's first Euroboud.

S.p.A. with Head Offire in Milan - Capital Lit. 7,507,500,000.

Annual General Meeting of the 28th April 1978

he Company's Shareholders Meeting was held in Milan on 8th April 1978 in order to approve the Balance Sheet as at 1st December 1977. In its Report the Board revealed the llowing significant items:.

Total Tumorer for the year under review aniounted to Lit. 210,173 m. (+20%),

Exports, already included in the total turnover, amounted to l.i. 18.312 m. (+40%):

Turnover of the controlled companies amounted to Lit. 68.000 m.; the algebraic sum of the results obtained by these companies gives a profit of Lit. 714 million:

Fixed Assets in Machinery amounted to Lit. 16.836 m.;

Onlinary depreciation for the financial year totalled Lit. 1.912 m., of which Lit. 1.425 m. cover costs over several years. The Depreciation Fund reached Lil 27.674 m.;

Reserves shown in the accounts at the end of the financial war lotalled Lit. 9,277 in.:

Personnel employed by the Company as at 31 December 1977 numbered 5,391 in all. The Group's employees. including the employees of the rontrolled companies.

The results for the year reflect an improvement (in respect of the past lew years) that rontinued encouragingly during the first munths at the current year. The loss of 280 million Lire with which the year rlosed was also the result of a capital operation implying the sale of a passive shareholding and a prudent revaluation of other largely active shareholdings.

he Meeting approved the Report, the Balance Sheet and the resequent proposals by the Board.

Tunisia Vows Challenge

TUNIS (UPI) -- Tunisia will be one of the dangerous outsiders in the World Cup soccer finals. The players are pledged not only to do well for their country, but also to improve on the performance of rival Morocco, which represented Africa in the 1970 finals. If anyone can help them do that, it is coach Abdelmaiid Chetali, a distinguished Tunisian international between 1960 and 1965 who has been running the national squad since 1975. He became coach after taking club team Star of Schel to the national championship and his record has earned him popularity among players

Last year, Chetali's players defeated Morocco, Algeria, Guinea, Nigeria and Egypt to put Tunisia in the World Cup finals for the first time.

He has coached his players on the German model, combining physical fitness, individual flair, and teamwork. In 1960, the Tunisians were knocked out of the World Cop qualification group by Morocco on the spin of B coin. In 1966, Tunisia, along with the rest of Africa, boycotted the World Cup to protest the failure of officials to guarantee Africa a berth in the finals.

In 1970, Tunisia again was defeated by Morocco on the spin of B coin, and, in 1974, the African representative at Munich was Zaire.

The campaign to reach Argentina this year included a 4-2 victory over Morocco, this time on penalty kicks before the Tunisians disposed of Algeria and Guinea to make the three-way, round-robin playoff with

A PRISON AND A PRISONER

By Susan Sheehan. Houghton Mifflin. 275 pp. $10.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

DON'T know quite what to make of "A Prison and a Prisooer." Susan Sheehan is a good observer as well as a determioed researcher, yet when I had finished her book, I felt at a loss to say what she thought—or wanted me to think—about the prisons and the particular prisooer she describes. I guess I have developed the habit of assuming that people who write serious books are trying to iofluence or persuade me in some way. It is difficult to imagine any other motive, uoless we accept the idea that sound books can be turned out simply so that the author can make a living. Even so, it strikes me as impossible for Miss Sheehan not to have distilled some identifiable attinude from all ber investigations.

"A Prison and a Prisoner" appeared originally in the New Yorker, and it reminds me of some of the stories I have read in that magazine. It is well-written and gives evidence of a superior sensi-bility, yet leaves me feeling a bit baffled as to how to respond to it. Perhaps Miss Sheehan is content to let me, and her other readers, make what we can of her material, just as many of the New Yorker's sbort many of the New Yorker's soort story writers do. It's such a covel experience in the sociological field that I'm not yet sure whether it's a good or a bad thing.

Here's the evidence, judge for yourself: Perhaps that is a youthful formula for a book. Perhaps it only takes estring used to. One is 50 ac-takes getting used to. One is so accustomed to sentimentality, polemic or persuasion. Yet, if I were asked to give s summary opinioo of "Prisons and a Prisoner," I don't believe I could do better than some answer such as "Apparently there are no simple solutions to the prob-

concedes that he would have the anyone who attempted to interfer with any of the robberies he has committed. Once they are warned he says, it's their own fault

Malinow's 36 years in prison can hardly be called dramatic. In fact they read rather like a story of a comfort-loving man living in slightly rundown hotel that cares exclusively to males, a man who supports himself by working not very strenuously, for a few hours day, a man who has a wide circle of friends: who is in good health and possessed of an easy-going philo. obical attitude.

While it is difficult for someone who has never had his freedom taken away—unless I count my experience in the Army—to judge the value of that freedom. In the instructive book "How to Open a Chess Game," by Evans, Gligoric, Hort, Petrosian, Portisch, Keres and Larsen, the basic injunc-tion laid down by Lajos Portisch is, "Your only task in the opening is to reach a playable middle game." Besides being objectively playable — that is, without serious, uncompensated weaknesses or a stultify-ing sterility — the middle game aimed for in the opening should suit a player's style.

That's not an easy task. Suppose you have an aggressive style like the Finnish Grandmaster Heikki Westerinen's and you choose the King's Indian Defense as offering the most possibilities for counterat-There will still be variations in which pure defense is the only alternative to getting smasbed.

Cauthen Takes Affirmed to 2d Victory

By Red Smith

BALTIMORE, May 21 (NYT) -Steve Cauthen, who does not walk on water but probably could ride on it, stood in the jammed and airless lounge of the press box while Pimlico's Sam Siciliano introduced the kid's kid brothers, 9-year-old did not get up a head of steam until did not get up a head of steam until it was too late.

Because there was no speed in front of him yesterday, Cauthen front of him yesterday, Cauthen victory over Alydar in the eighth race between these two fine colts, Steve sipped a soft drink and surveyed the moh in front of him with a tranquil gaze. What had he been thinking, somebody asked, when he saw Aly-dar range up to challenge for the lead as they turned into the home stretch in the Preakness Stakes?

"Nothing," he said. "I was waiting for Alydar and when I saw him I set my horse down at the head of the lane. He [Jorge Velasquez] set his horse down at the head of the lane. My horse beat him."

Two weeks ago, a few days past his 18th birthday, Steve Cauthen rode in the Kentucky Derby for the first time, and won it. Yesterday, he had his first mount in the Preak-ness, and he won. What did he think of his chance of sweeping the Triple Crown by taking the Belmont Stakes three weeks hence? "Pd like to win it." he said. It Alydar, who was so far back for most of the Derby's mile and a quarter that he never could threaten Affirmed, stayed closer to the pace yesterday and was still giving resolute chase to the winner when he ran out of race track. Did Cauthen feel he was catching Affirmed?

"No. In the last yards he might have gained a few inches but my horse was still running."

Affirmed and Alydar have run a total of 7 and nine-sixteenths miles against each other in eight races.
After winning six times, Affirmed has a cumulative margin of 2½ lengths over his rival. IOC Leader Denies L.A. Was 'Misled'

By Samuel Abt

ATHENS, May 21 (IHT) — Insisting that he would "not get involved in throwing stones," Lord Killanin ended the loternational Olympic Committee's 80th general meeting here yesterday by denying that Los Angeles had been "misled" privately by 10C officials.

"I refute that completely," the IOC president said when asked if Los Angeles had been led to believe that the IOC would relax its rules on financial liability for the 1984 Games.

The IOC's insistence that its rules be followed, combined with Los Angeles' insistence that the rule on liability be waived, caused a deadlock so severe that the games were owarded only conditionally last week.

Los Angeles has until July 31 10 find a solution and sign the IOC contract or lose the award.

"I don't think there is a misunderstanding." Lord Killanio said. "I think some members of the city council were unfamiliar with IOC rules. "The rules must be obeyed. It is possible, within the rules, to reach

No Comment

The IOC president refused to comment on reports from Los Angeles that city councilman Boh Ronka had returned from Athens and denounced the IOC and Lord Killanin.

According to news reports, the councilman said that Los Angeles had been "double-crossed and conned" by the IOC, which he described, with Lord Killanin, as "archaic and arcane aristocrats who don't understand the realities of the 20th century."

Characterizing these remarks as "rude," Lord Killanin said, "I'm not going to get involved in throwing stones." But, he added with a smile, "some of my friends [on the IOC] from Socialist countries will not appreciate being described as aged aristocrats." He had little new to report except that a 25-man commission had been established "to inquire generally and report" on the question of admitting China. The issue has long been before the IOC and Lord Killanin visited Peking last fall for talks. China demands the expulsion of Taiwan before it will enter the international Olympic movement, a demand that appears to have been shelved

Discussion Avoided

But, as throughout the week, Los Angeles dominated the discussion yesterday. And as he has done since the vote oo Thursday on the 1984 hosts. Lord Killanin shied from talking about options if Los Angeles loses

In response to a question, he noted that the rules had been changed here to allow the host city to "share its privilege with other cioes or sites in the same country upon agreement of the IOC."

When New York competed with Los Angeles for the nomination to he the host, it planned to hold some events in New Jersey. At the IOC's general meeting in Prague last year, Lord Killanin seemed to favor the sharing of the games, to reduce expenses, beginning only in 1988. When Sweden's bid for the 1984 winter Games was rejected this week, he made a point of saying that the games would have been dispersed over too broad an area, a maximum of 65 minutes by air between two points. Sweden had proposed to host the games at several cities, led by Gothenburg.

Asked today whether the IOC would permit the dispersal by an alternate bidder for the 1984 summer games if Los Angeles failed to agree. Lord Killanin said, "Yes."

5 Cuban Boxers Win Gold At World Amateur Meet

BELGRADE, May 21 (UPI) — Cuban heavyweight champioo Teo-filo Stevensoo retained his title yesterday when he stopped Yugosla-via's Dragomir Vujkovic in the first round and gave Cuba its fifth gold medal — two more than any com-petitor at the Second World Amateur Boxing Championships.

Stevenson, 26, who also won two 1976, was the only boxer to end the fight before the scheduled time of three rounds on the last day of the championships when all final bouts in 11 categories were held.

Cuba also won gold medals io the bantamweight (Adolfo Horta), featherweight (Angel Herrera), middleweight (Jose Gomez), and light heavyweight (Sixto Soria) classes. The Cubans, the most successful at the championships, also collected three silver medals.

In the first final bout, Kenya's light flyweight Stephen Muchoki won the world title when he outpointed 1974 world champion and Olympic gold medalist Jorge Hernandez of Cuba. The Cuban won the title against Muchoki in 1974.

In the flyweight class final, Euro-

Dr. Spock and Book Keep Rolling Along

ROGERS, Ark. (UPI)—To find Dr. Ben-jamin Spock's mountain lakefront home you need a map or detailed instructions and plenty of patience.

But once you are on course, bearing east southeast out of this increasingly popular retirement community and have convinced yourself that the winding and ascending dirt and gravel road will oot just simply narrow and end abruptly in the damp and silent pines, it becomes a simple journey, one that can end no place except at the entrance to the doctor's driveway.

His Ozark retreat, which overlooks the cove of a quiet blue lake, is shared with Mary Moran, at 34 young enough to have been raised by his famous baby book. They laugh and joke and take obvious delight in cach other's company. She is a native Arkansan whom he married two years ago.

The road to Dr. Spock's house is an analogy to the life of Dr. Spock: apparently, but not really, complicated. Although there were shifts in political

Although there were shirts in postucar attitudes, certainly, through the years there were oo strategic, basic changes in Dr. Spock's prescriptions.

His philosophy as a physician and humanist spelled out in "Baby and Child Care" through four editions has always been the same: A child reared with love, respect and trust will grow into a responsible, selfreliant, loving adult.

Throughout his life in all that he has written and said, Dr. Spock maintains that he acted, whether as a pediatrician or as a demonstrator against the war in Vietnam, from the dictates of an unflaggingly sharp sense of personal morality.

There are those who still wish to fault him for the youth of the '60s-some of whom would oot fight in Vietnam, others who protested in growing numbers against the war until a president withdrew and another About those critics, Dr. Spock observes,

"At least they can't accuse me of having brought up Spiro Agnew."

Good Times and Bad

Through good times and bad Dr. Spock and "Baby and Child Care" just keep rolling aloog. He turned 75 May 2; the book is in its 32d year of publication—more than 25 million copies have been sold in paperback. "Ben," as his family called him, was the oldest of two boys and four girls in a staunch Benublican and paintaining ways.

Dr. Benjamin Spock.

1917. But he was having a hard time adjusting to long pants, continually wearing out the knees by shooting marbles and such, so his mother wanted to alter one of his father's old suits for the boy to wear to conserve material. serve material.

The thought was mortifying to young Spock. To have to wear an "old man's suit" seemed more than he could bear. "I can't wear that, they'll laugh at me," he told his mother. "And my mother said, 'You ought to be ashamed of yourself, worrying about what other people think. All you have to know is that you're right."

"But I thought of that, you know, when Lyndon Johnson was trying to throw me into jail. I felt I was telling the truth to the American people."

Dr. Spock was indicted in January, 1968, along with the Rev. William Sloan Coffin Jr., chaplain of Yale University: Mitchell Goodman, a New York writer; Michael Ferber, a Harvard graduate student, and Marcus Raskin, co-director for the Institute for Policy Studies. They were tried and all but Raskin convicted on charges of "a con-tinuing conspiracy to aid, abet and counsel violations of the Selective Service Law." An appeals court reversed the convictions. So the Yale graduate of 1925, who went on to finish first in his class at the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons and then become one of the first doctors in America to complete residencies in both pediatrics and psychiatry, stood for a time convicted of something like treason. "As far as I know I was not called permissive until 22 years after 'Baby and Child Care' was published [in 1946]," Dr. Spock said. "The accusation was first made within a month of the time I was indicted in January of 1968 by Norman Vincent Peale, who preached a sermon that was recorded in a full column in the New York Times in which he said all the irresponsibility and lack of discipline in the young—by which he meant opposition to the war in Vietnam was because Spock told their parents when they were babies to give them instant gratifi-

"Instant gratification those words proved to me that Peale had never bothered to look at 'Baby and Child Care.' I get stopped by people and they say, 'Your book has been marvelous and has helped me to raise two marvelous kids and I doo't see that it's permissive. That's right. It isn't. The people who've read the book agree it's oot permissive. The people who call it permisive are those who claim righteously that they've never looked at it."

People's Party

He became a Socialist. In 1971 be founded the People's Party based on his own So-cialistic principles and ran for president on the party's ticket in 1972 and as its vice president in 1976. It did oot get very far and Dr. Spock was forced to admit the passion against the war could not be transferred into viable political alternatives once the war had

"I felt that we should find in average citizens and undergraduates a determination to get the control of the country back into the hands of the people." Dr. Spock said. "But if there is any such resolve I don't see it." So, for Dr. Spock it was two out of three: successful pediatritian and author; successful anti-war activist; failed peacetime politi-

Nowadays be spends much more time looking ahead than looking back. The sale of "Baby and Child Care" continoes to support him comfortably. He still gets and answers lots of mail, much more of it now about pediatrics than protest. He is asked to lecture frequently around the country and does so several times a month. He writes a monthly magazine column.

He speaks of his children and grandchildren with affection and bumor, in fact, there is little outside of the war and some of its principals that he does not address in one of these veins or the other

Secret Service Agent PEOPLE: Hurt in Rescue of Amy

A Secret Service agent broke a finger Saturday when he pulled 10² year-old Any Carter out of the way of an unruly elephant at a pet show, a service spokesman said.
"The elephant broke loose and was running in the general direction of Amy," the spokesman said. "The agent pulled her out of the way and lifted her over the fence. He said that the president's daughter was unhurt but the agent, whom he de-clined to identify, broke a finger and had other minor iojuries. He said the elephant was brought under control and no one else was

Mary Hoyt, press secretary for Rosslynn Carter, said that after Amy returned to the White House she told her parents "it was kind of scary." The pet show, an annual event sponsored by the family of the late Sen. Robert F. Kenoedy to raise money for a shelter for runaway children, was held at Hickory Hill, the Kennedy estate McLean, Va.

The Greek government has announced that Christina Onassis will grant more than $25 million to charities and cultural projects through the Alexander Onassis Foundation, created by her late father, Aristotle Onassis, as a memorial to his only son, who was killed in an air crash in 1973. The foundation will build and equip a nonprofit center and make annual $100,000 grants to persons and organizations contributing to "the struggle for human rights" and improvement of the environment Miss Onassis is president of the foundation, which is based in Liechtenstein.

Robert Strauss may be President Carter's chief inflation fighter, but be is also a wealthy Texan who doesn't mind spending his money. After briefing reporters co inflation last week in Washington he said he had to rush to catch a plane to Houstoo. Asked whether he would, with inflation in mind, be riding ecocomy or first-class. Strauss replied: "I'm going to fly first class unless they have a better class. They may have invented something
